A Week at Wild About Nature Camp

Item
18

North Shore Nature Programs' Wild About Nature provides a safe, nurturing environment for your child to explore, grow, and make the most out of their summer break. Camp Denison provides 35 acres of woodlands and shoreline to roam and contains numerous unique ecosystems. Our groups are kept small so that children have meaningful interactions with fellow campers and counselors. All of our staff go through a rigorous week of training and have prior experience working with children.

A typical camp day will be spent exploring the pond, forests, and streams that make up Camp Denison. Morning sessions will focus on a specific aspect of the week's nature theme and will involve hands-on investigations and activities such as catching frogs, identifying dragonflies, and learning wilderness skills. Afternoons are a little more relaxed. Campers can choose from a range of games and activities that might include building a bird feeder, playing Capture the Flag, erecting debris shelters, or fishing. We finish each day with a closing circle around a camp fire where campers share what we learned, saw, or made us laugh during the day.

Antique Waterbury Ogee clock

43

Manufactured in the late 19th century, this clock is weight driven, time and strike with a lever and pendulum movement. Clock is for mantle or shelf and must be level and plumb in order to work properly. A 30 hour clock, this has been used primarily as a decorative item for the past few years. It recently was wound and appeared to keep time and strike accurately, although the length of the cycle was somewhat erratic. The movement is in need of a good cleaning and dose of clock oil. For those with mechanical curiosity, this is an ideal piece for examining the working of timepieces without the specialized tools required for spring driven movements.
